

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

The Republican Members Offer a Protest in the House.

President Smart Submits a Lengthy Report Concerning Purdue University.

The Evidence Taken Yesterday in the Knightstown Home Investigation of Minor Importance Only.

In accordance with the joint resolution passed by the General Assembly Miss Callie, State Librarian, has purchased an elegant silk flag, which will be taken to Washington on the occasion of the dedication of the Washington Monument.

A rumor was current yesterday that the Republican members would resign in a body, rather than witness the passage of the apportionment bill now in the House. As they have been neither useful nor contented during the session, their absence during the remaining days could not be regarded as a public calamity.

The Republicans yesterday resorted to all manner of dilatory motions in order to prevent the consideration of the Apportionment bill, which came up as the special order. A roll call was demanded on every pretext, but the bill was finally engrossed, some three or four Democrats voting throughout with the Republicans.

Somebody exchanged overcoats with Senator Johnson yesterday. As the Senator's coat was much better than the one left in its place, and contained a fine pair of gloves, and inasmuch as nothing but two nails were found in the coat which was left, the Senator for thinks the principles of justice will finally induce the unknown party to return the overcoat.

Sensor Macy is too ill to leave his room. He believed that, although he has fever, his sickness is the result of overwork. The Senator has been without recreation since the Legislature has been in session, and in addition to his ordinary duties has attended regularly the sessions of the Knightstown Home Investigation Committee, and has written four books of evidence taken before the committee.

Yesterday morning a protest signed by Representatives Cope and Helms was sent to the Speaker's desk to be recorded. After striking out the word "infamous" the protest was spread upon the records. It read as follows: "Mr. Speaker—We protest against the high-handed and summary action of the majority on this floor in applying the infamous gag law in the disposition of the minority reports on the House Apportionment bill Nos. 122 and 123, thereby absolutely throttling the minority of this House and suppressing free speech and debate in the Indiana House of Representatives on a subject of so much importance as restricting the State for Congressional and Legislative apportionment."

President Smart, of Purdue University, has submitted a report of that institution in accordance with the resolution passed by the House. It shows that the institution has an aggregate attendance of 219, fifteen instructors, whose annual salaries amount to $13,800, average salary, $1,200; eleven laborers, who are paid from $2 to $3 a month. The questions relating to the expenses of the board are referred by Mr. Smart to the President of the board for answer. The university boarding-house is under the management of Mrs. M. L. Stinson, who charges $3.50 a week for students and $3 a week for instructors, and no control over it is exercised by the President of the university. Fifty-five of the students and four instructors regularly board there. The endowment fund applicable to the payment of teachers' salaries, February 1, 1885, was $12,000 and of the same amount $10,200 will be paid out on April 1. The University Treasurer has honored the drafts of the trustees against the general expense fund for $14,700.25, which is to be paid out in the appropriation recently made. It will take, besides the above indebtedness, $15,000 or $17,000 to run the institution upon its present basis, until the close of the present fiscal year. In conclusion the report says: "You ask by what authority I have been able to do this. My answer: 'In obedience to public law, pious faith, sworn duty and imperious necessity as herein set forth.'"

THE KNIGHTSTOWN HOME INVESTIGATION. The Knightstown Home Investigation Committee held another meeting last night. At the commencement of the session Mr. Byfield was in the room and spoke to the committee with reference to the conflict between him and the Chair two evenings previous. He soon withdrew, and neither he, Mr. Bynum or Mr. Goad were present during the hearing of the evidence. The first witness of the evening, Hattie Halloway, testified substantially as follows: Have practiced law for forty-one years. Known Goad since 1870. Am acquainted with the scandal about him and one of the inmates of the Knightstown Home. Goad came to see me when the matter was published in a city paper. He denied the truth of the story, and related the story from his standpoint. He has always denied the story, and said the girl never was in his house. He is intimate that there was a woman in the office on the occasion referred to, and I think he meant one of the women of New Castle. Nellie Layton came to my office early in the fall of last year, and on invitation took a seat at the table. I examined her particularly as to where she was on the occasion in question, and as to the truth of the scandal. She denied ever having sustained criminal relations with Goad. I then reduced the statement to writing, and my son swore her to the affidavit. It was then handed to Mr. Goad. He was not present during the examination. Nellie said she wanted to make the affidavit in order to exonerate herself and Goad. Both wanted to publish the affidavit, but I opposed it. The affidavit was to have been used in the G. A. R. investigation which was being talked of then. I don't remember of a case where parties withdrew affidavits which they had made. I don't know whether or not it would be a strange thing for a girl or other person to make an affidavit to screen themselves and afterward withdraw them. Goad did not pay me for my services in making the affidavit, but he paid my boy for material services. The girl improved me as a girl of ordinary intelligence, and of extraordinary forwardness. I know girls will make affidavits which are utterly false. I have known of affidavits being made by girls of fifteen, which have no foundation except in their own minds. Mrs. John R. Lewis is now at 287 South Pennsylvania street, formerly lived at Vincennes, and was employed from August, 1883, till March, 1884, as nurse at the Home. Sick children were brought in by the attendants, or on her orders, and were discharged from the nursery on order of the physician, Jim Kinney, aged twenty.

was brought there once. He had been away two or three years, and came back sick. Said he thought he would be benefited by drinking the water there. He died there. Heard he had been in the hospital at Louisville, Ky., with a disease. John Snyder was brought there in February, and stayed there a week. These two were the only ones who died during my stay there. When Kinney died I was worn out. Dr. White had furnished me a bottle of brandy—perhaps a pint to a quart. When I went back to look for it I found it gone. A boy told me Miss Boyd took it. She said she had taken it to Goad. When I next saw it the bottle was empty. The children never died from neglect at the nursery. They had the best of care, and Dr. White was in there frequently to see them. One time while I was there, there was a good deal of discord among the teachers. Mary Wilson resigned at that time. She was re-instated when Goad brought her back. A new teacher from Syracuse, N. Y., who had been employed to fill the vacancy, was discharged. Dr. White opposed the reinstatement of Mary Wilson. The children always had the very best of clothing. It would be hard to find Dr. White's equal as a superintendent. This was the far above reproach. He was never partial to anyone. Never knew of anyone being locked up in his room with anyone. Several times Goad stayed there a week at a time, walking through the halls. He early always brought his wife. Never knew of any improper punishment administered to the children. Think Susan says Wilson had a raw hide whip. Never saw any improper or imprudent conduct on the part of the young men or young women employed there. The committee will leave at 4 o'clock this afternoon for Knightstown, and will return Saturday evening or Sunday morning. There are three or four witnesses to be produced for Dr. White, and it is understood that Mr. Goad has about a dozen more to bring before the committee. Several of these were understood, last night, to be waiting at the hotel, to be called to the stand, but as Mr. Goad was not present, and no one knew who they were, the committee did not hear them. The committee will hear Mr. Goad's and Dr. White's testimony last. Following this the report is to be made up, and the matter to be submitted to the Legislature, which, it is thought, will be done Wednesday next.

AMUSEMENTS.

MR. N. C. GOODWIN AT THE GRAND. The Grand Opera House was filled to overflowing last evening to witness the initial performance of the popular and versatile comedian, Mr. N. C. Goodwin, and his excellent company in the grand double bill, "Those Bills" and "Confusion." From the rise to the fall of the curtain the house was in a constant roar. Mr. Goodwin was in his happiest mood. First he appeared as "Mathias" in his great burlesque of Henry Irving's, "Balls," and afterward as "Christopher Blizard" in "Confusion." That it was a success scarcely need be added—for in what has Goodwin failed—but the extent and lasting effect of this success cannot be described. Like the more serious performance of the great English tragedian, it can never be forgotten. The more applauded, however, was "Confusion." As "Christopher Blizard" Nat Goodwin is without a rival. In it he has reached perfection as a comedian, and remembrance of John Owens, and men of that ilk, pale almost into insignificance. The supporting company was excellent in every respect—in fact, much the best Mr. Goodwin has ever had. Mr. Walter Reynolds as "Mortimer Mumbleford" invested the part with a dignity and force that made it especially acceptable. Miss Adele Waters made a handsome and clever "Rose," dressing and looking the part to perfection, and acting it in an artistic manner. Mr. Robert Coote, Jr., was an excellent "Rupert," while Miss Hattie Delaro, as "Violet," was piquant and pretty, and looked as interesting as a rose in a garden. "Sweet sixteen," Maggie Holloway and Miss Jennie Weatherly were capable, as were the remainder of the company. Same bill to night, to-morrow afternoon, and to-morrow night.

"DAD'S GIRL" AT ENGLISH'S. English's Opera House was packed last night by a well-pleased audience who witnessed Miss Lizzie Uimer in "Dad's Girl," her new play. The production is entirely American. There is nothing "Frenchy" in it. It is fresh and charming, and of the Madison Square order of plays. Miss Uimer as "Mull" is natural as life. She looks and acts the part so perfect that one very nearly forgets they are witnessing an acted part. Again, the little lady does not try to carry the whole play herself, but gives her support to the other all honors. She is not a bit jealous, as can be plainly seen. Miss Uimer is not a handsome soubrette, but a genuine actress, possessing a shapely form, of which her arms are very attractive ornaments; they are a revelation, poetry and sculpture combined. Her voice is clear and of a charming tone, distinct and pleasing to the ear. Mr. George Boniface, the leading man, is well known to our people as a sterling actor. As "David Hoskins" he is very good; his make-up and acting are beyond fault-finding. If all actors took as much interest in their work as he does, they would be more successful in raising the stage to a higher standard. The rest of the support are very far above the average; they are well trained in their parts, and no breaks occur to mar the effect of the play.

"David Hoskins," who is "Dad," has after a life of penury on forty acres of fever and ague in Illinois, become suddenly rich by a discovery of coal. He takes "Mull," who has no father or mother, but is the daughter of her uncle, and between the old man and the girl is a close and warm affection. To save him pain she keeps from him the knowledge that his only son has committed a crime, by the whitest of lies. The son escapes the penitentiary and engages in an evil partnership with a gentlemanly villain. Again "Mull" shields him at the expense of her own happiness, and finally takes $5,000 of "Dad's" money for him. But the smooth partner gets the money, and Joe, her respectable cousin, kills the villain, and in returning the money to "Mull," falls dying at her feet. She finds her way back after a while to her lover, and the play ends in general happiness.

Will run the balance of the week, with the usual Saturday afternoon matinee, and deserves a liberal patronage. Next week George Mull in tragedy, "Her Attraction," and the Baker and Farron Combination in "The Emigrants" appear in rotation. These are all good drawing attractions, and present a repertoire to suit all tastes.

NOTES. The Museum is drawing large crowds this week. The attractions are new and great. The Zoo was crowded last night and at the matinee to see the Oates troupe. It is a big crowd.

The sale of seats for the engagement of the "Two Johns" Comedy Company, at the Grand the first half of next week, opens this morning at the box office.

Mr. George W. Jane, manager of the Union Square enclosure, "Three Wives to One Husband," which is at the Grand the last three nights of next week, is in the city.

PREPARING TO MOVE.

The Oliver Chilled Plow Works Looking for a Location.

Some two weeks ago two representatives of the Oliver Chilled Plow Works, of South Bend, called upon a leading railroad and business man of this city, and stated that their firm had decided to move their works if a favorable location could be found. A meeting of the Indianapolis Board of Trade was held, by whom an invitation was extended to the Messrs. Oliver to visit Indianapolis and investigate the advantages here afforded.

This resulted in bringing Messrs. James D. and Joseph Oliver, who spent yesterday in our city. They came to see what eligible grounds could be had for the site of their shops, what the railroad facilities and rates of freight to be secured upon the raw materials they use most largely—coal, lumber and iron—and for the distribution of their manufactured implements. Also, to investigate the matter of taxes, the workings of the police system of Indianapolis, and to learn something of the laboring classes here, and whether any Socialism prevails among them.

A rather impromptu trip over the Belt Railroad was hastily arranged yesterday morning, the train starting from the Union Depot at 11 o'clock with some sixty or seventy of our leading manufacturers and business men aboard, who were on hand to act as an escort and to point out to the Messrs. Oliver the objects of interest along the Belt, particularly the desirable locations for manufacturing establishments, and also to impart any information the visitors sought.

Among the passengers we noticed General Manager Henderson of the I. B. and W.; Colonel White of the Bee Line; Superintendent Turner of the L. and V.; and other railroad men; Judge E. B. Martindale, Mayor McMaster, Colonel I. N. Gordon, Nicholas McCarthy, and many other representative citizens.

The party were in charge of Vice President Mallott and Colonel Whitcomb of the Belt, the latter gentleman officiating as conductor quite satisfactorily—a passenger conductor on the Belt Railroad being a decided novelty.

A stop was made at the Stock Yards, where lunch and refreshments were served, after which the journey was continued and a visit to the Rolling Mills made, the excursion not being completed until nearly 5 o'clock p. m. The trip was thoroughly enjoyed by all, and proved one of pleasure as well as interest.

The working capital of the Oliver Chilled Plow Works is $500,000, and the reserve fund $300,000. To move from South Bend, put up new buildings and start elsewhere, would cost $200,000, Mr. Oliver says, and they want from forty to sixty acres of land for their shops' site.

Whether or not a bonus is expected or will be asked of our citizens could not be learned; but the Messrs. Oliver were well pleased with the many advantages Indianapolis has to offer manufacturers, and think any one of several locations which can be secured would do for their works.

This firm at present employs nearly 500 men, and have sometimes worked as many as 1,000 hands. Their monthly payroll is about $30,000, and they ship annually from 4,000 to 6,000 car loads of raw material and manufactured goods. These figures speak for themselves, and need no comment to prove what an addition this enterprise would be to Indianapolis if the Messrs. Oliver decide to locate here. That they will move from South Bend is said to be a determined point.

He is introduced to the Coppers. The new Police Commissioner, Mr. Thomas Cottrell, appeared at the Central Station last evening at roll call, and was introduced to the coppers, making a very brief speech, in which he said: "I am a stranger in this city, but glad to meet you all." "Where are you from?" yelled out one of the blue-coated individuals. "I have just arrived from San-fish, Ohio," said Mr. Cottrell solemnly as he took his seat amid great applause and laughter. All the police were favorably impressed with him and feel convinced that he will make a good Commissioner.

Terminal Facilities in Washington, D. C.—"How to Get In and How to Get Out" of a

In order that persons who are not familiar with Washington City may not be deceived by the misleading and unreliable statements made by a railroad company that is striving, by false pretence, to divert travel which usually seeks better equipped and better managed lines, it is desirable that the readers of this paper should be made aware of the facts in regard to the terminal facilities of the railroads entering Washington City.

The station of the Pennsylvania Railroad is the only first-class station in the city; it is located on Pennsylvania avenue, in the center of the town in close proximity to all the leading hotels, and within two minutes' walk of the Capitol Building. The station used by the other lines, located in Washington from the West is a second class building, located in a hollow, on a back street, and where strangers arriving by that line take carriages, they will encounter more or less difficulty in reaching their places of abode.

No railroad in America has as good facilities as the Pennsylvania for taking care of a large volume of passenger business. This was established during the Centennial Exposition in 1876 and all intelligent people know that the Pennsylvania, through her superiority in construction, equipment and management, still holds her proud position as the leading railroad of the world.
